

Where Nothing Comes Between You and Your Doctor

A New Concept in Student Health

"Whether I'm being proactive or responding in a time of need, it is great to be there for my patients and give them my undivided attention. It's the best way to practice medicine."

– Ted Swann, MD

Student Plans: Why is Swann Medicine Open Only to a Limited Number?

Swann Medicine offers “concierge”-like personalized care and wellness planning to a maximum of 350 patients. Dr. Swann is currently holding a limited number of spots for Clemson University students. Keeping the practice small allows him to provide a highly customized approach based on a thorough understanding of each patient’s unique needs -- precisely the way medicine should be.

A Clemson University graduate, Dr. Ted Swann has been caring for the Clemson community for more than eighty years. As a former Clemson University student body president, Dr. Swann has a special interest in student life and a healthy campus. He serves on Clemson University's Advisory Board for Student Affairs and the Pickens County Biomedical Sciences Advisory Committee. He earned a medical degree from the Medical University of South Carolina, where he now serves as a clinical faculty member. He is certified by the American Board of Family Medicine. Dr. Swann and his wife Susie have three sons, Davis, Will and Lucas.

"It's stressful enough to send your child off to college, and you're also concerned about what happens when medical help is needed. We are more than four hours away from our daughter, who is a Clemson senior. Having her under Dr. Swann's care gives us peace of mind. He's just a phone call away and that quick access has meant the world to us. Dr. Swann has been a godsend."
